Post-construction cleaning proposal template

A one-page proposal for a builder: rough, final and touch-up cleans, each with its scope and your price. The proposal is on page 2. To type yours, use the Word file: proofnotfluff.com/downloads/post-construction-cleaning-proposal-template.docx

How to price and send it

1. Get the size. Ask the builder for the square footage from the plans, or measure it on a walk-through. For apartments, count the units, their average size, and the hallways, lobby and amenity rooms.
2. Time your own crew. For each clean, write down the square feet one cleaner does in an hour on your own past jobs. Those are the only speeds that fit your crew.
3. Price each clean. The free post-construction cleaning bid calculator (proofnotfluff.com/post-construction-cleaning-bid-calculator/) prices the rough, final and touch-up cleans from your speed, labor cost, supplies, travel and margin, and shows the hours behind each price.
4. Fill every bracket. In the Word file, search for [to find each field. Delete any clean that is not in your bid, and change the scope lines to match what the builder asked for.
5. Add your terms. Write your payment terms, how long the price holds, and what is not included.
6. Send it as a PDF. Save the filled proposal as a PDF and email it to the builder's estimator or project manager with a short note. Keep a copy and the date you sent it.

> Price the three cleans first: the free bid calculator at proofnotfluff.com/post-construction-cleaning-bid-calculator/ prices each clean from your own crew speed and costs and fills this same proposal for you to print.
